

Taking a leadership role to drive our sector forward

Our position as the largest provider of on-site healthcare management in the region places real responsibilities on us.

We endeavour to consistently deliver excellence across our five core businesses (On-site Medical, Occupational Health Services, Mobile Clinics, Medical Support for Events and Emergency Medical Services).

In doing so, we must take a leadership role in driving our sector forward and strive to improve what we do at every turn.

Key among these is first-aid training for attending to patients before the arrival of an ambulance. Given the remoteness of areas that we cover, it is critical. Developing partnerships, for example, with health centres and maintaining an ongoing collaboration is vital in ensuring that these centres are adequately equipped to deal with emergency and trauma patients.

Healthcare provision cannot work in isolation. Therefore, we devote considerable resources to supporting our clients, from a range of industries, with targeted and sector-specific training for their on-site personnel. These personnel are a critical link in healthcare provision when time is of the essence. We regard this as one of our most significant contributions and a crucial service to the communities in which we operate.

RPM continues to make an active contribution to the ongoing debate around the challenges of on-site healthcare provision in our region. We champion causes close to our heart with an aim of improving what we do.

Dr Mohammed Qaddoura
CEO

We endeavour to consistently deliver excellence across our five core businesses. In doing so, we must take a leadership role in driving our sector forward and strive to improve what we do at every turn.

284

Average number of RPM ambulance emergency call-outs over a 12-month period.

